Sport Climbing Australia Team Member Joins Red Bull Team

The 17-year-old Blue Mountains local was announced as a Red Bull team member in October.

Sport Climbing Australia's national team member Angie Scarth-Johnson has been announced as a Red Bull sponsored athlete. 17-year-old Angie officially became part of Red Bull's ranks in October, and will have the opportunity to join some of the world's best climbers on team trips.

Angie started climbing at age seven and first stamped her name in the record books at just nine, when she became the youngest person to ever lead a grade 31 climb, "Swingline" at Red River Gorge, USA. A year later, Angie set yet another record, as the youngest person to lead a grade 32/33.

Based in the Blue Mountains, Angie is a member of Sport Climbing Australia's national open team, and spends much of her year travelling, competing, and climbing abroad.
